Cremation Cremation is a way of reducing the body to bone fragments, but is not a method of disposing of the body. You will still need to deal with the questions of viewing, visitation, service and final disposition. Cremation can occur at any point in the sequence. It could occur after a visitation period and funeral. It could follow a visitation period and thus before a memorial service. It could occur directly after a family viewing or after identification by family members. It is not affected by embalming and can occur with a casket or a rental casket with insert.

“There are a variety of ways in which cremation can be part of the funeral process, and these choices should be thoughtfully considered.”

Unless otherwise identified, all applicable taxes will be added to the prices indicated
